Markdown Basic

The template is written using Markdown language. You can directly fill in the template to complete your document. Here provides a guideline for basic Markdown syntax [2].

Link: <https://www.markdownguide.org/basic-syntax/>

The template also provides some template code for inserting tables and images.

How to insert tables

You can use the following format to insert tables:

```
1 | Rank | Breed |
2 |-----|-----|
3 | 1     | Ragdoll |
4 | 2     | Exotic  |
5 | 3     | British Shorthair |
6 | 4     | Persian |
7
```

You can use this website to generate the code above [3]:

Submission Format

Before submission, you should structure your document folder like this:

Where `example` is your root folder, `example.md` is your main `.md` document and `img` is a folder containing all your images in the document.

Please replace “example” with your project name.

Submission Format

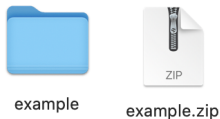

Figure: Compressed File

After organizing the folder, you can compress the folder into your-project-name.zip and be ready to submit.

How to submit

- 1 After completing your document, to submit, you can send your .zip file to zz229@duke.edu along with information of this article (author information, category [Innovate/Research/AMA], etc.).
- 2 Please be aware that only lab leaders are eligible to send the submission email. Lab members should submit their .zip document to me through their lab leaders.
- 3 After receiving the documents, I will help you to upload them to our repository.
